Minister underscores connecting technically skilled youth with job market

ISLAMABAD

STAFF REPORT

Federal Minister for Poverty Alleviation and Social Safety, Syed Imran Ahmed Shah Wednesday underscored the importance of connecting technically skilled youth with the job market through strengthened collaboration with the National Vocational and Technical Training Commission (NAVTTTC) and the Prime Minister's Youth Programme (PMYP). The minister made these remarks during a visit to the Pakistan Poverty Alleviation Fund (PPAF), accompanied by Secretary Naveed Ahmed Sheikh. The delegation was briefed by PPAF Chief Executive Officer Nadir Gul Barech on the organization's ongoing initiatives, operational framework, and its wide-ranging efforts in social development. During the briefing, the CEO shared that PPAF is currently operational in 150 districts across Pakistan, working in partnership with 163 organizations. He highlighted that over the past 20 years, PPAF has supported more than 2.5 million households, with a large number of people successfully achieving self-reliance through various support mechanisms. The minister emphasized the need for transparency, robust audit systems, and effective follow-up mechanisms in development programs. He directed officials to devise a clear and actionable plan to ensure sustainable livelihoods for beneficiaries following training and skills development.
